*Zannier Băi San Hô to reopen on 1st April 2026
following major restoration after typhoon Kalmaegi*

After several months of intensive restoration, Zannier Băi San Hô will once again open doors to welcome guests on 1 April 2026. The reopening follows the devastating impact of Typhoon Kalmaegi, which forced the property – widely regarded as one of Vietnam’s most acclaimed luxury coastal destinations – to close late last year.

The storm caused significant damage across the country, including to the resort and its grounds, prompting a comprehensive recovery effort to return the property to its original design and operational standards. During the peak refurbishment phase, up to 200 workers were engaged onsite, undertaking a meticulous programme of works focused on craftsmanship, safety and preserving both the resort’s original essence and the integrity of the guest experience. The scale of the works extended across villas, public spaces and landscaped grounds, requiring a coordinated effort between skilled trades, artisans and the resort’s operational team to ensure consistency at every level.

“Reopening after an event of this scale requires careful balance,” stated Arnaud Zannier, CEO and Founder of Zannier Hotels. “There is always a strong desire to welcome guests back as soon as possible, but in a luxury environment, every detail matters – particularly for the Zannier Hotels brand, which is founded on a principle of attention to detail and capturing the soul of a destination through the minutiae. Our priority has been to ensure the property returns at the level our guests expect, while also supporting our team and community through the recovery.”

“We are incredibly grateful to the hundreds of individuals who contributed to this process – from our construction teams and artisans through to our staff on the ground – whose commitment and care have been instrumental in reviving Zannier Băi San Hô,” says Alain Bachmann, General Manager of Zannier Băi San Hô.

COMMUNITY INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT

Set between rolling hills, rice paddies and a protected stretch of striking coastline in Đắk Lắk Province, the property’s reopening comes as both it and the wider region continue to recover from the event.

Integral to Zannier Băi San Hô is a deep connection to the surrounding community and broader Vietnamese culture, which informs everything from its architectural language and interiors to guest experiences. This ethos has remained central throughout the recovery, with restoration efforts aligned to the resort’s longstanding approach of working with local craftsmen, sourcing regionally, and ensuring the property continues to reflect the cultural richness of its setting.

Throughout the closure, the resort maintained a strong commitment to its team and surrounding communities. All employees were retained, providing stability for local staff, while 165 English language training sessions were delivered to support professional development. In the immediate aftermath of the storm, the resort also worked alongside regional border authorities to aid 100 local families through targeted donations and support.

Environmental restoration remains ongoing. The house reef located offshore will be formally reassessed in April following the rainy season, with long-term conservation partner SASA Marine Animals Rescue Centre returning to evaluate any damage and guide the next phase of the reef rehabilitation programme.
